IIMS Professional Qualifications recognised with an Award

Fifteen years after launch, the International Institute of Marine Surveying (IIMS) distance learning commercial ship and yacht and small craft professional qualifications were recently nominated for an Award in the International Maritime Club's Golden Shield Excellence Awards 2017 in the 'Leading Maritime Training Institute' category. And at the ceremony on Friday 15 September 2017 at the Lloyd's Old Library in London, IIMS was announced as the winner in this category.

Institute Vice President, Capt Zarir Irani, accompanied by Allen Brink, received the award.

Commenting on this award, Mike Schwarz, IIMS Chief Executive Officer, said, "After more than 15 years as a leading provider of distance learning education programmes in the marine surveying sector, it is humbling to be recognised for our work. Whilst one's motivation is never to seek awards, rather it is to ensure we are delivering the best possible content to our students, it is heart-warming to know that others should recognise and acknowledge our work; and we are most grateful."

About the International Maritime Club:

The International Maritime Club has been serving the maritime industry for over 7 years. The club works for the conscious and continuous development of the vast maritime industry by acting as a platform where professionals from various sectors of the maritime industry come together under one roof to exchange knowledge and ideas on the maritime trade and industry. The membership of the club is limited to 365 drawn from the maritime community.

IIMS graduates speak up:

"I found the course to be very information and useful. Thank you for all the work you put into organising a good range of subject matter".

P Brookes

"I would like to thank all involved in the very valuable and excellent course. It certainly lived up to my expectations and more".

G Parrotte

"The course was a very thorough and well thought out introduction to the surveying profession".

K Butterfield

Ends.
